

lewis britton

Posted by owen timms - 2010/01/07 22:31

i could say alot about that man but i am not bitter got a lot more money for one thing.it is a shame machine plastering was promoted by a bullshitter as meny people have found out just to let you know he spends all his time and money in a pub in hertfordshire the world is safe.ive heard all the storys germany etc bullshit ive now him 20 years and had the pleaser of trying to teach him funny he wouldnt listen enough said to sum up if you need help speak to my good friend scot or my self if we dont help each other now won will

=====

Re:lewis britton

Posted by kevmc - 2010/01/25 05:58

i need help with my 1st flowing screed job so if you can give me any info you have i would much appreciate it guys thanks

=====

Re:lewis britton

Posted by IanTullochCMG - 2010/01/25 10:31

No problem I am sure we can help!
What type of machine are you planning to use?

=====

Re:lewis britton

Posted by kevmc - 2010/01/26 10:04

i have a quattro

=====

Re:lewis britton

Posted by werB7Dev - 2010/02/05 15:29

What exactly do you need to know regarding your first flowing screed job? Sure we can help but what do you need to know?

Doing flowing screeds is dependent expressly on your knowledge of the material and application process (which is simple enough) and not particularly about the machine.

If you let me know more info then I'll be able to go over it with you. Or, if it's possible, even come out on site and give you a full instruction and to ensure that this and every other screed you do goes perfectly.

=====